What's New in Version 1.0.2: • Rebuilt a lot of the program. Much improved performance. • Small program adjustments. • Corrected a few bugs. In non-profit communication we often use the term "word of mouth" for advertising. How does word of mouth advertising work? A perfect example of this is a pizza shop that sends out fliers, which also show up in the mailboxes of their customers. Although fliers and mail are obviously not "everywhere", people who get them are more likely to be aware of the place and then share the word with their friends. In other words, the word spreads with time. That is what happens to apps too. People install them and then run them for a while, and in this time they come into contact with the world of computers, get accustomed to their structure and features, etc. And although this knowledge is acquired, it doesn't automatically spread from them to others. The only thing that spreads it, is your friends and family. And the more friends and family you have, the more people you can contact with this information. Thus the word spreads. I will now explain some basic concepts of word of mouth advertising. How can your friends and family spread the word about your app? It happens often, that people are trying to recommend your app to their friends, but they don't know what to recommend or what's good and what isn't. This is the most common thing, that starts the actual process. "Hey Joe! Want to install an app? Try this one." Joe hears this and thinks "that's a good app! I'll give it a try!" and does that. At some point he is satisfied with the app and decides that he will keep it on his phone and will recommend it to his friends. And then, the word spreads. How can you Zedc1e01e8
